

Demand response for large consumers of electricity

Golbon Zakeri, The University of Auckland

Abstract:

In this seminar we will describe the New Zealand electricity market (NZEM), over which energy and reserve is co-optimized. We will then proceed to describe a model for large consumers of electricity who are capable of demand response as well as participating in the reserve market. We will present two ways of solving this problem.